

Statement of participation

Michael Frank

has completed the free course including any mandatory tests for:

---

Looking at, describing and identifying objects

This 2-hour free course explored observation, description and interpretation of objects, object life cycles and understanding artefact databases.

---

Issue date: 23 August 2018

www.open.edu/openlearn

This statement does not imply the award of credit points nor the conferment of a University Qualification.
This statement confirms that this free course and all mandatory tests were passed by the learner.
Please go to the course on OpenLearn for full details:
<http://www.open.edu/openlearn/history-the-arts/looking-describing-and-identifying-objects/content-section-0>

COURSE CODE: A105_1

---

Looking at, describing and identifying objects

---

<http://www.open.edu/openlearn/history-the-arts/looking-describing-and-identifying-objects/content-section-0>

---

Course summary

This free course, Looking at, describing and identifying objects, will enable you to practise and develop your skills of observation and description of objects. It will also enable you to interpret objects and work towards writing your own object life cycle. You will also work with, and understand artefact databases.

Learning outcomes

By completing this course, the learner should be able to:

- demonstrate skills of observation and description of objects
- interpret objects and work towards writing object life cycles
- understand artefact databases.

Completed study

The learner has completed the following:

Section 1

Meeting an object

Section 2

Observation, interpretation and communication

Section 3

Life cycle: production and consumption

Section 4

Identification

Section 5

Life cycle: consumption

Section 6

Life cycle: afterlife

Section 7

Writing an object biography

Section 8

Conclusion